Charles's Foundations

- Creative if the topic interests him
- Competitive in his area of interest
- Naturally analyses information
- Logical in approach
- A direct communicator

Personal Statement

Charles is a naturally creative student who has both a drive to compete/achieve and an innate need to ensure correctness. Charles has the ability to assess unique solutions to a problem. Not being people-oriented, he is able to put forward ideas without needing the approval of others or work in a close group environment. Being quite assertive and intense, he is reluctant to yield his ideas just to avoid confrontation. He tends to be a perfectionist and tries hard to avoid mistakes. Charles is not naturally sociable and is selective as to whom he calls a friend.

Charles may find it difficult to relax or even trust people until they have proven themselves. It is important to realise that this restless person needs room to move and a learning environment which will allow him time to investigate and create. He should have as much freedom as possible to solve problems or make decisions in his own time frame. Charles has a need to be respected for his ability to produce or achieve accurate, practical or worthwhile outcomes. A shrewd decision maker; Charles prefers people around him who are committed to excellence.

Charles has a naturally analytical approach, he also needs to gain some practical result from his learning, so is therefore motivated to learn by the opportunity to gain knowledge, prestige and achieve a practical outcome from the assignment. Complex assignments and achieving a meaningful result are also extremely important. There should be clear guidelines, and preferably no sudden or abrupt changes in the work direction.

Charles's ideal tutor will be a direct but democratic coach, who sets clear objectives and timescales in a logical and systematic manner. Charles prefers an exact assignment description, preferably given in writing.

- Acting once realistic timescales are agreed and set

What Charles Has To Offer

Charles is a naturally detailed and creative person who likes to be in control of a situation. He will research subjects of interest and will usually have lots of projects on the go at once.

Positive study skills are his flair and creativity with the ability to tackle complex problems.

Areas to develop with the tutor could include personal reflection and listening or working with others.

The values that Charles is most capable of contributing to any organisation are vested in his ability to push for a practical and original result in an area of specialist knowledge. He also has the ability to think strategically and solve problems creatively. Charles is logical and analytical. This coupled with his powerful personality, will add value by using these behavioural characteristics to ensure a meaningful outcome for any organisation. The career path which Charles ultimately chooses will benefit from these qualities.
